

End-to-end website architecture for the pre-launch CultureShare experience.

Senior product-design direction for the CultureShare pre-launch website.

01

Website Strategy

The CultureShare website should function as a pre-launch marketing and conversion experience, not a catalogue of every mobile-app feature. Its job is to explain the vision, establish trust, demonstrate the product concept, and convert visitors into waitlist subscribers.

The product documentation centers the experience around Scrolls—media-rich cultural stories that can include images, video, text, recordings, Reels and documentaries. It also defines Raiders as subscribers/followers and Historians as authorized users who provide secondary accreditation and validation.

The brand rationale establishes the central positioning: “Telling our own stories, our own way.” The site should therefore feel editorial, cultural, human and contemporary—not like a generic SaaS landing page.

Homepage — End-to-End Flow

The homepage is the primary storytelling and conversion surface. Move visitors through understand → feel → discover → trust → anticipate → join.

01 — Hero

Eyebrow: THE CULTURE OF US

Headline: Tell Your Story. Share Your Culture.

Copy: CultureShare is a cultural community built for discovering, documenting and sharing African stories, traditions, people and heritage—in our own voices, on our own terms.

CTA: Join the Waitlist · Secondary: Discover CultureShare

02 — Cultural Problem

Headline: Our Culture Deserves More Than Memories.

Frame stories, languages, traditions and family knowledge that can become disconnected from future generations.

Transition to: What if the next generation could discover culture directly from the people who live it?

03 — What Is CultureShare?

Headline: A Living Archive of African Culture.

Position CultureShare as a digital cultural community where Africans can document, discover and share the stories that define who we are. Introduce Scrolls as the core content object.

04 — Scrolls

Headline: Every Story Becomes a Scroll.

Show Reels, images, video, audio, written stories, short documentaries and combinations of media through an editorial Scroll showcase.

05 — Explore Culture

Headline: Explore Beyond What You Know.

Use product categories such as cultures and tribes, traditions, festivals, family rites, beliefs, narration, trade, arts, food, ornaments, cultural attire, stories, maps and natural resources.

06 — People Behind the Stories

Headline: Follow the People Who Keep Culture Moving.

Raiders: people who follow creators for their cultural stories and Scrolls.

Historians: authorized users who add a layer of cultural accreditation and validation.

07 — Pan-African Cultural Flow

Headline: From Our Roots to Everywhere We Are.

Use an interactive African map inspired by the logo rationale, showing cultural exchange within Africa. Make it experiential rather than decorative.

08 — Why CultureShare?

Headline: Because Culture Is Not Static.

We Tell. Culture is something to live, speak and share.

We Share. Stories move between people and communities.

We Connect. Discover people connected by culture.

We Remember. Give today's stories a place to live for tomorrow.

09 — How It Works

Discover → Explore cultures, people and stories.

Create → Turn knowledge and experiences into Scrolls.

Share → Share stories with people who care.

Raid → Follow creators and receive their latest stories.

Connect → Build relationships around culture and community.

10 — App Preview

Headline: CultureShare Is Coming to Your Phone.

Show Home, Discover, Scroll, Profile and Raider experiences. State Coming soon on iOS & Android clearly.

11 — Waitlist

Headline: Be There When CultureShare Goes Live.

We're building the home for African stories, knowledge and cultural discovery. Join the waitlist and be among the first to experience CultureShare.

Input: Your email address · CTA: Join the Waitlist

12 — Final CTA

Headline: Your Culture. Your Story. Your Way.

CTA: Join the Waitlist

About Us

Hero

Eyebrow: ABOUT CULTURESHARE

Headline: We Believe Our Stories Belong to Us.

CultureShare was created around a simple belief: African culture should be documented, shared and experienced by the people who carry it.

Our Story

Headline: Culture Has Always Been Shared.

Build the story around grandparents, family stories, language, food, music, ceremonies, traditions, craftsmanship, migration and identity. Transition to: CultureShare gives those stories a digital home.

Our Mission

Headline: Telling Our Own Stories, Our Own Way.

Give people the ability to Tell · Document · Discover · Share · Connect.

Our Vision

Headline: A Future Where Culture Is Never Lost Because It Was Never Shared.

Explore intergenerational knowledge, cultural identity, African storytelling, diaspora connection, digital preservation and community.

What We Believe

Culture belongs to the people who live it.

Every story has value.

Communities should shape their own narratives.

Technology should strengthen culture, not replace it.

Knowledge deserves context.

Culture should be alive, not frozen in time.

What We Are Building

Scrolls — stories and cultural media.

Raiders — people following the stories they care about.

Historians — additional cultural validation and accreditation.

Communities — spaces for people connected by identity, interests and shared experiences.

What not to foreground on the pre-launch website

The product specification includes longer-term concepts such as Cowries, Wallets, Buying/Selling Scrolls, Hall of Fame, Root Tree, Family Profile, Going Live and AI-powered payment/verification. Keep these out of the primary pre-launch narrative so the experience stays focused.

Recommended website story: Discover → Create → Share → Follow → Connect, with Scrolls + People + Culture + Community as the main product pillars.

Source Basis

This document combines the supplied Culture Share — Expected Product Functionalities Breakdown and CultureShare — Brand Identity & Logo Rationale, translating those materials into a pre-launch website information architecture and UX flow.

Product source concepts used: Scrolls, Raiders, Historians, search/discovery categories, communities, profiles, onboarding and the distinction between initial and later-stage functionality.

Brand source concepts used: “Telling our own stories, our own way,” #1B4332 dark green, #C9A84C gold, the intra-African map direction, and the framing of CultureShare as active cultural storytelling rather than passive preservation.

Production note: Final copy, imagery, legal text, privacy language, analytics events and email infrastructure should be finalized with the CultureShare team before production.

Deliverable intent

This document is structured to move directly into sitemap definition, wireframing, high-fidelity UI design and responsive website implementation.
